Initial Flow of 75,000 Feet Gas Struck in Herrington

Well Drilled by Southwest Production Company on Edge of Woodhull Village Hit Gas in Oriskany—Hole Being Cased and Cemented Before the Well is Drilled Into Full Production.

The Herrington No. 1, first deep gas producer in Woodhull, reached pay sand last Friday. The well showed an initial flow of approximately 75,000 feet when the Oriskany was pricked. The well was drilled by Southwest Production Company, an affiliate of the North Penn Company which is one of the biggest operators in the Pennsylvania deep gas sands.

As soon as gas was struck the drillers ceased operations and prepared to case up the hole. This required getting the heavy steel derrick ready to lower more than three thousand feet of six and three-quarters inch casing and cementing this string of pipe in the bottom of the well. After the quick drying cement used in this Halburton Process has had time to "set", a six inch bit will be used to drill through the cement in the casing and deep enough into the Oriskany sand to bring the well up to its maximum flow. In the early days of Oriskany drilling in this area the wells were brought in with a heavy flow of gas before the casing was run, causing a great waste of fuel, a practice overcome by greater experience putting down in this high pressure sand.

Casing was all delivered on the job the first of this week and a crew of men in charge of Perry Myers assisted by Earl Cuneo started to run the pipe Tuesday.

The Herrington No. 1 was started about three months ago following some two years of activity in leasing land in the vicinity of Woodhull. The location was made only about one half-mile west of the spot where the Fenner Taft well was drilled some seven years ago, the operators being undeterred by the Taft well proved a [redacted] being too [redacted]. Also on [redacted] structure the [redacted] Perkins well failed to produce gas when drilled a short distance from Addison.

The new "strike at the Herrington well has brought a deluge of lease men back into the territory around Addison and Woodhull. Practically every foot of land for several miles around Woodhull had been tied up before the Herrington was fairly under way, and now that gas has actually been found farmers on all sides of Addison whose land happens to lay on the structure, have all been solicited to lease. Most land in the vicinity has been tied up now at rates that vary from fifty cents to a dollar an acre rental. There are a few who have not signed and these are being given plenty of attention from the field men who are now combing the section to pick up a few loose acres wherever they may be found. This always happens when gas or oil is struck.

As to the production possibilities of the Herrington No. 1, that is still anybody's gamble. It may drill in to become a big well, and it may only flow a small amount of gas when the bit goes to the bottom of the Oriskany. But regardless of the actual flow of the Herrington, men who have had some experience with natural gas production are enthusiastic over the possibilities for a big field around Woodhull. The fact that the sand has loosened up enough only a half mile from the Fenner Taft to produce gas at all, points to the probability the Oriskany becomes more open to the west and gives promise of good wells on at least a part of this large dome running towards Troupsburg.

It is a fact that wells drilled at Harrison Valley on the same anticline have brought big flows of gas, and Harrison Valley is not many miles so[redacted]west o[redacted] bur[redacted]

Opponents of the President's court packing bill are greatly heartened by the report of the Senate Judiciary Committee which acted unfavorably on the measure by a vote of 10 to 8. Foes of the measure now feel certain they can defeat it on the Senate floor if it comes up for vote. Several compromise proposals for the Roosevelt proposal to add 6 new justices, voted down in the committee and opponents of the bill are now ready to fight it out instead of dickering with the President for a compromise.

One of the first perplexing problems to face George the VI of England is the question of his prospective sister-in-law's title. The new king is believed to desire giving Wallie Simpson the title of Her Royal Highness, when she weds the former monarch who handed his brother the crown. Prime Minister Baldwin is opposed to giving the title to the twice divorced woman and this stand is backed up by strong church and court circles.

Nelson Payne Dies Suddenly

Nelson B. Payne, 69, died suddenly Friday afternoon, May 14, 1937 in the Corning Hospital after a serious illness of only one week.

Death was caused by erysipelas caused by an infection. He first became seriously ill a week ago and was only taken to the hospital Wednesday afternoon. It was not thought that his condition was critical at that time, although he had been under the constant care of a nurse.

Mr. Payne was born in Woodhull, March 10, 1868, a son of the late Levi and Elizabeth Boylan Payne. His early education was received in the schools of Woodhull and upon completion of his school work he engaged in the dry goods business there until 35 years ago.

He then came to Addison where he engaged in the dry goods business, taking over the business of the late E. M. Welles which he conducted for several years. In 1914 he left Addison to become credit manager for the H. B. Claflin Dry Goods Company in New York City and a few years later was in the bond business with Tucker-Anthony Company, also in New York. Mr. Payne also engaged in the real estate and insurance business in Addison. This business was sold to Wickham Crocker, Sr.

Mr. Payne purchased the American House two years ago and after renovation and changes has built that hotel into the leading guest house in this vicinity.

Regarding Mr. Payne's personal life, he married Dora A. Baker, March 14, 1888. Of this union one daughter, Mrs. Frank Watkins, Larchmont, N. Y., was born. He never held public office but was always actively interested in public affairs and was well versed in the history and political setup of this vicinity.

His death comes as a severe shock, not only to the members of his immediate family but a large circle of friends. Funeral services were held from the American House Sunday afternoon with the Rev. John V. Axtell of the Presbyterian Church officiating. Burial was in Addison Rural Cemetery.

Edwin Kelly is Leading In First Baby Derby List

Terry Towner and Nancy Rae Sprague Follow in Close Race — New Honor Roll List of First 30 Babies Will be Published Each Week — Bulletin Giving Standings and Winner's Loving Cup in Advertiser Window.

After the Baby Derby office closed Saturday at 10 P. M. a count of the Baby Coupons was made. This disclosed the fact that Edwin Kelly, Addison, led the field. Closely following him were Terry Towner, Addison and Nancy Sprague, also of Addison. A complete list of the thirty Honor Roll Babies can be found in the Baby Derby ad.

Be sure to read thoroughly the Baby story in each issue of the Advertiser and Sentinel as it contains information from week to week which is valuable. If you fail to read it, you might overlook some details which would hinder your baby's chances of winning.

The Honor Roll and its workings seem to have confused several people, despite full explanation in last week's issue. Some people insist that only the 30 Honor Roll babies will be kept in the race. That is not so; every one reporting either coupons or subschiptions each week will be kept in the race. The next Honor Roll standings will be based solely upon what is reported this week. The credits which went to determine the leaders in the first Honor Roll will not be counted toward the second Honor Roll. In other words, each Monday morning the entrants start on an even footing in the race for positions on the next Honor Roll.

Perhaps many of this week's Honor Roll babies might lose out for places in the next Honor Roll (based on this week's business).

The subscription lists for many of the outside sections have not yet been taken out. A fine opportunity to advance the baby is offered by working these lists for parents in Addison, Cameron, Woodhull, Jasper, Elkland, Troupsburg, Rathbone, Osceola, Painted Post and many other towns as well as those living on the various rural routes.

"If you find your place in life, know what you want to do and have a goal, then life will be really worth while to you", was the climax of a talk given 120 young ladies of the Standard Bearers, Hornell District of the Methodist Church. The speaker was Miss Edna Bradley of Buffalo, who has been in the India mission field for several years. The group met in the Methodist Church of Addison Thursday night as guests of the Addison group.

Entertainment

Group singing was led by Mrs. F. Oliver, with Miss Betty Pepper as accompanist. Mrs. Lacey welcomed the honor guests and the members of the Standard Bearer groups from the various churches. A toast to America was given by Mrs. Earl Fletcher, Painted Post. She stated that a true training in Americanism was a training for the home and that the America of the tomorrow would be built by the youth of today. "America" was sung as a response by the entire group.

Four girls of the Corning Grace Church society presented a vocal number, " In the Garden with Jesus". This was followed by a toast to the church by Miss Marjorie English, Corning, who asked for a renewed faith in Christ and the church and an extension of the teaching of Jesus in all lands.

THE AMERICAN WAY

Robert A. Willson, former principal of Addison High School, in a talk in the Baptist Church Sunday evening, told the audience of some of the "unfinished business" which remains to be done in the world before the scientists can lay claim to our having a truly scientific universe. Among the items we use today which seem perfect, compared to the original inventions are the electric light and the motor car, yet Mr. Willson pointed out that the most efficient bulb which has been invented only utilizes 12 per cent of electric current, while automobiles of today take only a fraction of the power really contained in gasoline.

These according to Mr. Willson, are two examples of the challenge held out to the youth of today. We have made a slight beginning towards perfecting a mechanical age. During the long, drawn-out depression many disciples of this or that 'ism have been telling us we have reached such mechanical perfection that the only way to give every man, woman and child a part of a crust for their living is to cut down production of things and divide up jobs into short time affairs which will hold down production.

We have always thought this was the gospel of defeatism. It is a well-known fact that when machines were in their crudest state men worked the longest hours and received the least pay for their work. They had few, if any comforts of life. Their children had no advantages of education and no opportunity to rise to a higher scale in life than the parents. Then the de- [illegible] of the machine age starte[illegible] work were gradually shortened and machines multiplied the power of hands to do work. With the increase in production of the necessities of life manufactured products kept growing cheaper and the scale of living steadily rose, especially in this country. Increased earning power in America has ever meant increased spending power and an ever increased distribution of things which make living more enjoyable for the average family. Today the average workingmen have more of the good things of life than the kings of olden days, and even many of the people on government relief are enjoying mechanical contrivances which would have made them the envy of the nobility in England 100 years ago.

Yet, as Mr. Willson pointed out last Sunday evening, we have only made a beginning of the development of science, and the machines of tomorrow will turn out improved facilities for our children's children to enjoy. It is the American way to steadily increase the scale of living of the average man through increase of his productive power by machines. Gradually as the depression wears away we are coming back to that old, successful viewpoint. The thick-skulls and bureaucrats are still trying to press legislation which would make the central government supreme in this land as in countries in Europe, but public sentiment will eventually take us back on the road which offers the greatest opportunity for a better life to a great number of persons. It is the American way.

PROSPECTS FOR COALITION

To many unhappy persons in politics—those, for instance, who are looking for a realignment of dissatisfied elements in both major parties—President Roosevelt's Supreme Court issue is expected ultimately to provide the ground for a meeting place. As they view the situation, if the President's plan loses out, wholly or in part, he still suffers a severe loss in prestige. That loss may even extend to control of his party. If his plan is adopted, irreconcilable Democrats may seriously consider formation of a new party composed of anti-Administration Democrats and Republicans.

The point is that such a new party would have a common meeting ground in the Supreme Court issue. Until now, there was little reason why anti-New Deal Democrats should go over to the G. O. P. The Republicans were split wide open by differences between those for whom the President was going too far and those for whom he wasn't going far enough. A party in that condition obviously would get nowhere. So talk of nominating a conservative Democrat for Vice President on the Republican ticket for 1936 came to naught; Al Smith herded few Democratic votes into the Landon column; and few Democrats seem to have availed themselves of the opportunity, thrown open to them for the first time, to join the Union League Club in New York City.

But now the two Republican factions have united into a common front, if only temporarily, just as eighteen years ago they buried the hatchet to fight side by side against President Wilson's League of Nations proposal—the Republican godsend of that era. At present, the New Deal is less of a bipartisan organism that at almost any other time since 1933. As long as Democratic opposition to the President was confined to conservatives, they would have little interest in the fight of the Republican progressives to control the G. O. P., but now among the dissentient Democrats are liberals as well as conservatives.

This is the situation which gives form to the talk of coalition. But it has to be remembered that the making of a new political party is attended by many difficulties, including the rending of party associations, the laying aside of political prejudices, some of them personal, some of them traditional. Men whose political success has been built on party alliances may hesitate to burn bridges even though they may have crossed them; they fear to destroy the means of retreat, if retreat at some future time appears to be desirable. So at the present time, coalition though something to be talked about is not exactly anything to be counted on.

HOLDING THE BAG

The one outstanding feature of government in Washington these days is wastefulness. Presidentially established bureaucracies are seeped with waste and Congress has settled down to the most wasteful period of its career. Not only does Congress waste money at a tremendous rate by acceding to the demands of our innumerable bureaus for spending money, but in the matter of frittered away time it is setting an example of waste no private institution could follow long and survive.

Since it convened January 5 the Senate has averaged about 3 hours of work during the available days and the House has done little better. There the Congressmen sit, stalled by the inertia of executive control which has gone so far that party leadership is vested in one man. So major legislation stands still while the President goes on a fishing trip to the Gulf of Mexico, and meanwhile Mr. John Q. Taxpayer as usual is holding the bag.

CHANGE OF HEART

When the proposal to increase the membership of [illegible] Court was first made, it was [illegible] the bill's opponents as well [illegible] would be endorsed in the Senate by a handsome majority.

Today, the most authoritative surveys and estimates indicate that the majority in favor of the bill is extremely slim—two or three votes. A number of senators originally believed to be for it have recently come out in opposition.

What has caused this change? Several elements are involved—but the most important of all is the force of public opinion. It is no secret that every congressman's mail has bulged with letters discussing the proposal, and that the majority have opposed it. The metropolitan and rural press is overwhelmingly opposed. So are most of the nation's most respected political and economic commentators.

More and more, partisanship is disappearing in regard to packing the high court. The people and their representatives are realizing that here is one of the most vital issues the country has yet faced, and that it must be debated on grounds of principle, not politics. That is a heartening sign.

REFINANCING

At best, the Secretaryship of the Treasury is a hard job. Under present conditions, say observers, it is a major headache to its occupant—Mr. Morgenthau.

The failure of Federal revenue to measure up to predictions makes it essential for the Treasury to issue more bonds at the end of this fiscal year. It is up to Mr. Morgenthau to assay the market, get the money at as low an interest rate as possible.

This takes plenty of figuring, in the light of the substantial drops in government bond values occurring early this year—drops that have been but slightly recovered. No authority thinks the decline was due to doubt of Government's credit. It was due, instead, to more private financing, offering higher interest rates than government bonds, to profit-taking for the raising of money with which to pay income taxes, and, highly important, to the Federal Reserve Board's order to its members to increase their deposit reserves, which necessitated heavy liquidating of governments.

Treasury long-term issues having been paying around 2½ per cent, on par value. New bonds will have to pay about 3 per cent, which means that carrying charges will cost the government millions more than formerly.

"Sooner or later, there is going to be a great popular uprising against free-and-easy taxing and loose and political spending. It almost seems that many of the various tax-levying bodies have been sitting at the feet of Pancho Villa".

Belief Seen Growing That Relief Is Undesirable Federal Function

By MARK SULLIVAN

RELIEF—the money for it, how much it shall be, where it shall come from and who shall administer it—has come to the top in Washington with implications that go deep and far. It is not confined to considerations of economy—in the form it now takes it involves large questions of government. It is no an issue between Republicans and Democrats—most members of both parties and the ablest leaders of them are on the same side. It is not, except partially, an issue between Congress and President—on the most fundamental aspect of it they are together.

As often happens when the important news is not a single event but a new condition, the latest development can best be made clear by reciting what led up to it. I summarize briefly and offhand:

Previous to Mr. Roosevelt's administration public relief was provided almost wholly by local governments—cities, states, counties, towns. Mr. Roosevelt announced that the Federal government should take responsibility where local governments were too hard pressed. At once local governments, with much justification and with great enthusiasm, described themselves as too hard pressed.

The Federal government threw out money lavishly. In some cases it required local governments to help, in some cases not. In some cases it gave direct relief—that is straight gifts called doles to individuals. In some cases it gave relief in the shape of jobs on public works.

Presently some rough principles evolved. Mr. Roosevelt said that straight gifts, "doles," were undesirable, as coming from the Federal government. The Federal government's contribution should be confined to jobs provided by public works.

This led to necessity of classification. The permanently needy, cripples and the like, were one class. They were called the "unemployables." The other class were the temporarily distressed, those who could work and were willing to work, but could not find private jobs. These were called the "unemployed employables."

The first class, the unemployables, Mr. Roosevelt said, should be cared for wholly by local governments; support of these should be, as it had been, a function of the home governments. The second class, the unemployed employables, were an incident of emergency; these were casualties of a national calamity, the depression; the Federal government should take care of them to the extent that local governments could not.

Out of this policy arose questions between the Federal government and the local ones. In some ways it was of the nature of buck-passing. Since local governments alone must support the unemployables, the ones who could not work, the local governments had a motive for keeping that class as small as possible. If a person could be called an "unemployable," the Federal government would help care for him. So a good many persons very far from able-bodied were maneuvered into the class of employables, and therefore on to the rolls of public works. Upon Congressmen fell many errands of representing their local governments before Mr. Roosevelt and his aids, proving that there were so many unemployed employables in their districts that Mr. Roosevelt must set up public works to care for them.

The principle question between the Federal government and the local ones was the allocation of cost of public works. Mr. Roosevelt said the Federal government should pay the cost so far as local governments could not. Local governments, quite naturally, proceeded to prove they could not pay anything, or very little. Proving this to Mr. Roosevelt and his aids became an important part of a Congressman's work. The allocation differed with each case. In some cases, Mr. Roosevelt and his aids required the states or cities to put up 50 per cent; in other cases much less, in some cases nothing. The average contribution required from states and cities is now about 13 per cent.

When Mr. Roosevelt tried to cut the Federal outlay for public works Governors and Mayors came to Washington to emit loud groans into Mr. Roosevelt's ear.

That brings us to the present. What is now happening is several realizations of fact, which realizations have far-reaching implications. It is realized that Federal appropriations for public works can not readily be reduced so long as states and cities demand more. The problem is, therefore, one of reducing the local pressures. Various devices have been suggested. Mr. Roosevelt was urged to require every Governor or Mayor asking for more money to take a kind of municipal pauper's oath. The most practicable suggestions go on the shrewd principle that states and cities will ask fewer public works in proportion as they are required to pay a larger percentage of the cost. One suggestion would require the local governments to pay 50 per cent.

Realization that relief is an undesirable function for the Federal government leads to questioning whether some other functions had not better be taken back by the states. There is in Washington today a rebirth of belief in state rights and state responsibilities.

Politics and Deadly Fumes

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Some stories are true even if they never actually happened, and among them is a tale which is told about an interview between a distinguished chemist and the very exalted head of a government. The chemist, who was a foreigner, had been summoned for the interview, not knowing why; but at the hour fixed, which was 6 o'clock in the evening, he presented himself promptly. His credentials having been examined, he was ushered into an anteroom and informed that His Excellency would see him shortly. He waited. A half hour passed and an official in a splendid uniform emerged through the portals of what seemed to be the office of the great man.

The chemist thought his hour had come. But nobody paid any attention to him. Another hour passed during which a succession of dignitaries emerged through the portals. At last a secretary approached the waiting chemist and said that His Excellency would be pleased to see him in about half an hour. He was sorry about the delay but a crowd had gathered in the square to make a demonstration for His Excellency and it would be necessary to acknowledge the ovation.

A little before nine o'clock the chemist was at last escorted through a series of antechambers into the presence of the great man who, being deeply preoccupied with great matters of state, went on reading the evening newspaper for five minutes while the chemist stood uneasily at attention waiting to be observed. Then the great man looked up and said "Ah! Professor Blank! I have wanted so long to know you and to discuss with you certain chemical problems which I must solve this winter. I will come directly to the point. You have deep knowledge of these matters. Tell me what is the gas which if spread through the capital of a country will most quickly and surely paralyze the populace and demoralize the rulers of the state?"

The chemist, who had had three hours of exasperation in which to reach the boiling point, looked at the great man, thought carefully for a moment, and then replied: "Your Excellency, this is not a chemical problem. The answer to your question has been known since the beginning of civilization. The most dangerous gas which can be burned in the capital of a nation, the gas which has more often destroyed governments than have revolutions and foreign armies, has a very pleasant odor. Every one likes it. It is known as incense."

In one of its many versions this tale has a happy ending. For the great man replied: "I know it. But how shall I find men who do not burn incense under my nose?"

I commend this story to General Farley in those private quarters of an hour when he contemplates the present state of the political masterpiece that he produced only six months ago. In his closest and most honest searching he will find. I think, that his united and triumphant party is now divided and demoralized for no other reason except that the fumes of incense were too strong for human frailty to endure.

That and that alone will explain the extraordinarily sudden and extensive political disaster which has developed in the past three months. For the ordinary causes which produce political trouble have been lacking. There has been returning prosperity and reemployment and a rising standard of life. The partisan opposition has been negligible in size and without conviction or purpose. Yet the Administration which started out in January with a tremendous promise of social reform and with undisputed control of Congress has gotten nowhere with its reforms and has all but lost its control of Congress.

Why? Because the incense was so thick that it rose like a cloud through which the President, isolated among mere courtiers, no longer could see and feel the true will of the preponderant mass of the people. The terrible illusion took hold of a lot of little men, who were too unknowing to know the meaning of power, that the great vote in November meant whatever they chose to make it mean. They would not believe, because they did not wish to believe, that the vote was an ordinary landslide in a succession of landslides since 1920. They could not bear to think that the decisive cause of that landslide was not popular admiration for their ideas but the return of prosperity, and so they worked themselves into the notion that they had a Mandate, for all practical purposes a unanimous Mandate.

And what was this Mandate that they celebrated so eloquently? It was no program of reforms. For the fact was that beyond certain general phrases which no one disputed, they had no program that they themselves were agreed upon. What they meant by the Mandate was that the President had been invested with the right to be unopposed. That is what the true believers believe. When they talk about the Mandate they do not mean specific reforms. They mean that Congress must do what it is told. They mean that the Supreme Court must get out of the way. They mean that the opposition must bow its head reverently or be branded as economic royalists, defeatist lawyers and grinders of the faces of the poor.

They are startled to discover that the American people do not like and will not endure delusions of grandeur in their public men. They have collided with a deep and ancient prejudice against the abnormal aggrandizement of any one. That prejudice comes from the heart of the democracy, and is its essence. It is by that prejudice against personal power, against the arbitrariness of inflated individuals, that a people shows whether or not it really has the instinct for self-government.

The average man does not bother himself much about the technicali-

County Musicians Have Excellent Festival Day in Addison Friday

Over 1300 Musicians in Vari-Colored Uniforms Exhibit in Addison High School — Arrangements Expedite Matters — Faculty and Students Cooperate — Excellent Band, Orchestra and Chorus Units Display Wares.

Music, music everywhere in Addison Friday. Over 1300 young musicians representing schools in Steuben County took part in the annual music festival held in Addison High School. This village may well be proud to have entertained this group, for it was here the idea of the county festival originated.

The young people were on time and showed a masterly technique that placed them in a position occupied by college musicians in past years. The units were on time in most instances and many favorable comments were heard relative to the manner in which local arrangements had been made to expedite the handling of so many musicians and instruments.

Police, Boy Scouts, faculty members and students of Addison all cooperated to facilitate handling of traffic, instruments, music and visiting students. Several hundred busses and cars were moving in and out of the school zone throughout the day in addition to trucks used to carry instruments in some cases. No serious accidents were reported.

Arkport, first on the program at 8:40 and last to enter did not appear on the early part of the program. All others of the morning units were on time.

Arrangements for the judges were made in the balcony and a section roped off for their convenience. A stenographer took their notes, transcribed them on a silent typewriter so that when the day was through there was an accurate record of all that had happened to the various choruses, bands and orchestras.

The streets of Addison were filled with young people wandering about between numbers. Local soft drink stores had a land office business for it was observed that the first thing in the morning many of them were eating ice cream cones and

Elkland Defeats AHS 9 to 8

The Elkland High baseball team came, saw and conquered the Addison High Knights here Wednesday afternoon to a score of 9 to 8. The locals outhit the visitors but lacked the punch in the pinches. The visitors opened the attack when Dorn hit a home run to score Caffo for two runs. Addison retaliated by scoring five runs on two 2 baggers, two errors and two walks. Dominick, pitching all the way for Addison had a bad sixth inning when the Pennmen scored four runs on a single, double and 3 bagger, a walk and an error. Ragged fielding by the locals in this inning aided the visitors.

Attempts to tie the score were tried in the last of the sixth and seven on hits but could not stretch them far enough. Elkland used four pitchers to stop the Knights. The game was played in excellent football weather.

Hott, Warmus, Ludlam, Kreisler pitched for Elkland with Elliott catching. Lou Dominick pitched for Addison and Root caught.

Score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Elkland	2	0	1	1	0	4	1
Addison	5	1	0	0	0	1	1

Elkland—9 runs, 10 hits, 2 er.
Addison 8 runs, 11 hits, 2 er.

Politics and Deadly Fumes

ties of the Constitution or the construing of legal principles. But if the primal stuff of a free man is in him, he knows quickly, and quickly he resents and resists the spectacle of any one who says that his will should be done always and without question. Though the average free man may not be able to debate the due process clause, he knows by sheer democratic instinct when any one is getting to be too great to sit in the ordinary seats of authority.

Once he has realized that, he exhibits his democracy by reducing the aggrandized individual to his proper size.

Drivers' Licenses are Extended— Motor Bureau Announces Changes

Albany, May 17 — Definite announcement, following the approval of necessary legislation by Governor Lehman, was made by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Charles A. Harnett today extending for this year only, the expiration of all drivers' licenses that would under previous law cease to be legal for use after midnight May 31. In accordance with the new plan all chauffeurs' licenses expiring on that date are extended to June 30 and operators' licenses due to expire on May 31 are extended to September 30 of this year.

Renewal of chauffeurs' licenses, the legal use of which has been extended from May 31 to June 30, will begin at all issuing offices on or about June 1. Renewal of operators' licenses due, in accordance with the extension, to expire September 30 will begin early in July. In each instance later announcement will be made designating the exact date on which renewal applications will be available to the public and notification of the extensions has gone forward to all police and peace officers in the state of New York as well as the proper officials of all other states.

Since January 1, 1937 all original operators' licenses obtained as a result of the required examination have been issued for a period of three years from the date appearing thereon. Under the new law a driver's license may be renewed at any time within a year following its expiration and such renewal will be for a period of three years unless the applicant personally demands a renewal for one year. The law extends this privilege in the following language.

"An applicant for a renewal may, if he so desires, apply for a one-year renewal * * *. The Commissioner may renew a license upon such application for a period of one year from the expiration date of such license except that an operator's license issued to expire on May 31, 1937, shall be renewed for a period ending September 30, 1938", or in the case of a three-year license, September 30, 1940.

Acting under this provision in the law Commissioner Harnett has determined that application blanks for a one-year license, either original or renewal, shall not be available at any point other than an issuing office or delivered to any person other than the applicant demanding a one-year license.

The fees established in the amended statute creating the three-year license are as follows:

Chauffeur—original licenses, one year $3.00, three years $5.00.

Operator — original licenses, one year $1.00, three years $2.00.

Chauffeur—renewal licenses, one year $2.00, three years $4.00

Operator — renewal licenses, one year 50c, three years $1.50.

All applicants for original licenses, excepting those applying for a one-year operator's license, are permitted by law four tests or examinations, all of which must be had within four months of the date the application is filed. An applicant for a one year operator's license is permitted but two tests within the same period of four months from the date of the application, and the law further provides that "no refund of any part of any fee of two dollars or less accompanying an application shall be allowed unless the applicant shall be denied a learner's permit".

The law as amended further provides that a junior operator's license shall automatically become a regular operator's license when the licensee reaches the age of eighteen years.

County Musicians Have Excellent Festival Day Here Friday

pop corn. And as observed when they first appeared here a few years ago, a local drygoods merchant was selling out and the young people bought up the old hats to wear about the streets.

Uniforms were of all colors worn by the band members from east and west and north and south. Some were bright and gaudy and others sober and somber, but all made a gala day here and the dampness of the weather did not dampen the ardor of the young people taking part in the festival.

Stenograpric reports and criticisms taken by the judges, Francis Diers, head of music at Fredonia Normal and Dr. Harry King, Fredonia, have been sent to all the music directors of the participating schools. Recommendations and suggestions for the vocal and instrumental groups were made in these reports. Inasmuch as this was a non-competitive affair, these reports will act the decision of the judges.

Poppy Week will be observed from Monday, May 24 to Saturday, May 29. It will be sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, and it should be supported by every loyal American.

The sale will be conducted in the residential section by the following members of the Legion Auxiliary: Mrs. George Freeman, Mrs. B. F. Short, Mrs. Fred Frost, Mrs. William Kennedy, Mrs. H. E. Auringer, Miss Janette Davis.

The sale on Main street will be conducted by the Misses Onolee Hunt, Bernice Ricker, Ellen Aldrich and Catherine Troy.

During Poppy Week, the American Legion Auxiliary will hold a window display in the window of the furniture store of S. D. MacDowell on Main street. The 12 departments of the organization will be illustrated so that all may see what the A. L. A. represents in the life of the community.

Each of the following departments will be symbolized and labelled so that the activities will be clear to the observer: Americanization, community service, Fidac, legislation, welfare, rehabilitation, memorial, national defense, publicity, music, constitution and by-laws, health camp and veterans' mountain camp.

Let us contribute toward the peace which we all desire by keeping alive in our memories the sacrifice symbolized by the poppy. Remember to buy your poppy.

Edwin Kelly is Leading In First Baby Derby List

Be sure to add new supporters in the matter of coupons every day—no matter how few they are. The more people you have to save for you, the more coupons will be found in the box each week. Impress upon these people that the merchants are glad to issue the coupons BUT THEY MUST ASK FOR THEM!

If your baby had a high rating on the first Honor Roll try hard to better that standing this week. If it was far down the list just remember that a little work will certainly show results. It is supposed that during the first few weeks the bulk of your work in organizing people to save tickets for you has been done. That leaves your time comparatively free to do a little subscription work. Just remember that only 10 of the year-old subscriptions, when added to the 200 mile bonus given, will give any baby no less than a 2000 mile credit in the Baby Derby. Also, keep in mind that if you can get together these 10 subscriptions you will get the 2000 mile credit.

Make your subscription and coupon reports this week make YOUR BABY lead the second Honor Roll!

You parents have entered your babies in the race. Do you want it to be an "also ran" or do you want it to win the $150 in cash and loving cup symbolizing supremacy in the land of babies in this section? Remember, your work doesn't stop when you have the baby's picture taken—that's when it starts. You have many friends who must be seen regarding Baby Coupons. You must impress upon them the importance of shopping where Baby Coupons are given, and further, make them remember to ASK FOR THE COUPONS!

Then you have another task. All around you are hundreds of people who subscribe to either the Addison Advertiser or the Woodhull Sentinel. The subscriptions of these people will help make your baby a winner. Are you going to sit by and let other parents come right in your neighborhood and pile up credits from the subscriptions of people you could get for the asking? Of course you're not! So therefore it behooves you to come to the Baby Derby Office at once. Look over the list of hundreds and hundreds of subscribers. Among them you will not only see hundreds of friends and acquaintances but actually relatives who would undoubtedly help your baby.

Don't lose a minute! Get busy at once. Remember, you are given credits for subscribers who pay up back subscriptions. In other words, right around you is a gold mine of opportunity for you to help your baby advance in the race. Don't let it wait there for someone else. Get on the job at once. If you fill one book and earn the 200 extra mile bonus do not be satisfied. Come in and get more books. The sooner you clean up your field, the sooner you will make certain that no one else will get that business away from you. Be sure to come in for subscription lists—today!

Distributor Defies Weather in Chevrolet

A trans-continental automobile journey every month would be a comparatively simple matter for Miss Hazel Weast of Missoula, Mont., for she drives nearly 5,000 miles monthly to deliver a morning paper to residents of Montana's Bitter Root Valley.

In May, which marks her first year on the job, Miss Weast will have piled up impressive mileage on the job—nearly 60,000 miles. Driving her Chevrolet, standard in equipment except for heavy duty tires and fog and spot lights, she leaves her newspaper office every morning at 2:30 and makes her trip through the valley to Darby, Mont., returning promptly at 9 A. M. for a second breakfast. Her daily trip runs 150 miles, a great deal of which is on side roads, and in her year on the job, never has she failed of railroad-like precision and regularity. Besides delivering several thousand copies daily to agents in the section, Miss Weast makes many additional stops daily to put copies of the paper in individual boxes for suburban and rural subscribers.

"I like the work and I've never had any trouble making the deliveries", said Miss Weast. "I carry a shovel and I know how to use it, but so far I have not had to. I wear warm clothing and have a heater in my car. I have not had an uncomfortable minute so far, and I do not expect to have".

Not even storms and sub-zero weather during the past winter prevented Miss Weast making her trip on scheduled time. She said she is looking forward to the summer months for more daylight driving as much of her fall and winter trip is made in darkness.

Miss Weast drives one of the fleet of five cars that delivers the Missoula Daily Missoulian all over western Montana, helping keep its slogan "the breakfast table newspaper of Western Montana".

Festival Notes

By the Rambler

Two youngsters in one of the early morning units could not be found and delayed the appearance of the group. They were lost in the building.

—o—

Some of the singers were not following their leaders and were singing after the others in the unit got through.

—o—

I never saw so many good looking girls in many a day. I was sort of wishing that I was back in high school days. It was a case of being born "30 years too soon".

—o—

Early morning arrivals hit out for the ice cream parlors for at 9 o'clock many of the youngsters could be seen with ice cream cones.

—o—

It was a pleasure to see the number of boys in the glee clubs. When I was in school you were a sissy if you went out for glee club. Dr. Christiansen of St. Olaf's in Minnesota tells of fellows quitting the football team to sing in the college glee club. Music gives a more lasting satisfaction than athletics.

—o—

This was one public function where things were run on the advertised schedule.

—o—

May I pay tribute to the organizers of the festival, faculty and students of the Addison High School under the direction of Irving Gladstone and Joseph Greyback.

—o—

It was interesting to me to watch the smiles on the faces of the various musicians. They seemed to take a real pleasure in what they were doing and not participating "just because".

—o—

Four Corning units, with ten minutes practice, united to present a mixed choir. And their music was very good too. Of course the bands and orchestras were good too.

—o—

I would not have been in the judges' position in this event for it was hard to determine the marks for some of the bands, for many of them were good considering certain handicaps as to instruments, numbers, uniforms and other things.

Only those who register now can receive payment under the terms of the Agricultural Conservation Act. All farmers are eligible to participate in the program.

Supervisors in charge of the sign-up in the territory served by this paper are: Frank Turner, post office Greenwood; West Union, Hartsville, Greenwood, Canisteo, Jasper and Troupsburg. Leo Gorges, post office Lindley; Caton, Hornby, Lindley, Erwin and Corning. Charles Wightman, post office Bath; Campbell, Cameron, Bath and Thurston. These poppies are made by disabled soldiers in hospitals and the funds received from their sale, is used for the care of these soldiers. It is a worthy project and I commend it to you. It was the custom of the congregation to repeat the 23rd Psalm in concert. One woman's idea of joining was to keep about 10 or 12 words ahead of the congregation all the way through. One day a stranger asked who was the woman who continually kept ahead of the others and a disgruntled parishioner said, "she is the lady already by the still waters while the rest of us are lying down in green pastures."

—o—

Did you ever see so many musicians as there were in Addison Friday? And the uniforms and the busses. It sure was a gala day. The Addison musicians do not have to take a back seat for any aggregation on the basis of Friday's work.

—o—

And the above brings to mind the fact that Joseph Greyback, the musical director here is leaving. Just when he gets to know people and people to know him, a better offer comes along and away he goes. I sort of feel that something might have been done to keep him here. This should not be a training ground for teachers.

—o—

Well, the King is crowned, so what? People fainted, millions were spent on pomp and pageantry, dispositions were frayed, sorrow was expressed for the absent Prince and all for what? And this, while millions were jobless and hungry in the Empire. It seems to me all this was not necessary to impress the people.

—o—

It must be my indigestion which makes me so grouchy and pessimistic when I write things like the above.

There is a good book in the library for men to read and it would not harm the women folks either. It is not a new book but has a great deal of common sense in simple language. "Want to Get Ahead" is its title and it was written by Ray Sherman, former Syracusan. Simple little things which can be done to make us more acceptable to employers and ourselves is the general theme of the book, which can be read in an hour.

Well, Folks, the mad scramble for gas in this vicinity is beginning again. Rumors of quantities of gass in the Woodhull area brought about the revival. However, there is no 75,000 feet per day flowing in Woodhull for the well has not even been tapped. They expect to bring in gas this week.

Some of the CCC boys resent the slurs cast upon them by people of various communities and feel that all should not be held up to scorn by the activities of a few. One of them wrote me this week and the letter is published in the CCC column.

—o—

Speaking of the camp I'm hearing rumors that the whole affair here will blow up in July and the Addison CCC camp will be a thing of the past. It seems it was put in here for political expediency and is no longer needed here. I have never felt this was the intention of the CCC, having boys build the dams. They are more for conservation work.

—o—

When you and I run out of gasoline while driving an auto, people just laugh and smile with us, but when a motor car salesman runs out of gas. Well, that's about like a fire wagon running out of gas. Such a thing happened to one of the former local young men on the Corning Addison road Monday. His wife and not a client was with him when it happened.

—o—

A great business combination is noted in the same house in Elmira a doctor and an undertaker.

—o—

May is stealing some of April's thunder by acting up as a month of many changes. Just when everyone is set for warm spring weather it turns colder and rains.

—o—

Saw my first Chinese buffalo Monday. One of the motion picture companies is using it as a publicity stunt for the picture "The Good Earth" which is supposed to depict the life of the average Chinese person as found by a missionary.

—o—

Have you noticed how much greener things are this week than last week? Gardening season is in the air now.

—o—

That's all.

The "White Legion" Is Authentic Drama of the Canal Zone

A thirty mile strip of death and disease-ridden land forms the background for "The White Legion" the intensely dramatic human story back of the building of the Panama Canal, produced for Grand National by Bennie F. Zeidman, which will be shown on the screen of the Avon Theatre, next Saturday.

How science in the persons of heroic men and women fought the dreaded Yellow Jack and its carrier, the deadly mosquito, in the jungles of the Equator, how two women fought for a man's love, while death stalked on every hand, makes an enthralling and historic chapter in the progress of civilization now filmed for the first time with Ian Keith and Tala Birell in the featured roles, supported by a cast of distinguished reputation.

Karl Brown, who wrote and directed the story went straight to authentic sources for his material and has pictured accurately the heroic men and women who freely offered their lives and health that humanity might be the gainer, incidentally making possible the building of the "big ditch" across the Isthmus.

Fesides the featured arists, Ian Keith and Tala Birell, the cast of "The White Legion" includes such well known names as Ferdinand Gottschalk, Suzanne Kaaren, Lionel Pape, Rollo Lloyd, Teru Shimada, Nigel de Brulier, Nina Campana, Warner Richmond, Ferdinand Munier, Harry Allen, Don Barclay, Snub Pollard and Robert Warwick.

Cost of government, with ever-increasing burdens spells the ruin of democracy as it exists today. If it is your desire to get what you want for the present without taking heed for the future of this nation, then you and countless thousands are on the right tract and going at heedless speed. The crash is sure to come.

If you think that any one man power offers a safe future for this nation, you are playing into the certainty of political dictatorship, and so are aiding in cracking the foundations of our republic which were built upon honor, justice, history and reverence for an all-wise ruler.

Stop where you are—before it is too late to avoid the crash. Love for money may become a powerful sin, but love for power transcends it many fold. Watch out, or the nation falls!

Begin these safeguards in your home community—in your county—in your state—and then and not until then, will this menace of greed and political power vanish.

Stop debt! Stop mortgaging. Get onto the pay-as-you-go highway as soon as possible and stay on it!

The selling value of real estate is gradually falling in most places. The government is foreclosing on thousands of properties where loans have been made.

Much as you may desire to have agriculture, music, foreign languages, home economics, physical training and some other specialties taught in our schools, if the cost of government does not drop decidedly, and soon, many of these will have to be omitted.

Do not lose your patriotism to a level which endangers our inspired Constitution or threatens national bankruptcy.

If your kitchen sink is overflowing do not put sideboards on it, but clean out the drain. It is more sensible and costs must less.

Life, Religion and Costumes of India Told Standard Bearers

keeping with this African idea, table and dining hall decorations and programs were used to carry out this theme. All joined in singing the response number, "Greenland's Icy Mountains". Songs used during the night were printed in the program.

Bath society members gave a vocal selection, "Living With Jesus". A feature of the night's program was a reading by little Miss Phyllis Hickey, Corning, entitled "Dorothy Entertains the Minister", by telling him many family secrets. As an encore she presented "Seeing Things at Night".

Mrs. La Major, conference treasurer for the Bearers in Rochester and Mrs. Barnes, also of Rochester, prospective field worker for the conference were presented by Mrs. Henderson, director, who then presented the speaker, Miss Edna Bradley.

Native Costumes

Twelve costumes from India, worn by those at the banquet, were shown by Miss Bradley. They are part of a group of 41 native costumes brought from India by her. The Standard Bearers will study India next year. She explained the parts of the costumes and their uses, differences in sectional garments worn by Hindoos, Mohammedans and Moslems. She told how they were made and their cost. This part of the program was a style show of India.

Some of her experiences with animals were given, including two with snakes. However she stated she had been in India four years before she saw a snake. Some humorous experiences with monkeys and their perversity and tricks were spoken of by Miss Bradley.

She said in part, "India is not a country to be feared. It is a land of beauty and color and interest. Servants of a high order there are secured for $4 monthly. School sessions begin at 6:30 in the morning and close at noon. Seistas are taken during the hot part of the day from twelve until three when students arise and study.

Daily Religion

"Krishna, the household God is the idol of India. A small idol is kept in every household and the first thing in the morning he is placed on a small throne, resembling a play davenport of a child. A garland of flowers is placed about both couch and idol and a small gift is presented, which may be only a spoonful of rice or other food. This is done by each member of the household. Then the Hindoo bathes, returns to his or her home and prays on a prayer mat. A special headcovering is used. The edges contain a woven series of Krishna's footsteps and the center contains woven words of the prayer. An anointing of the forehead with a combination of paint and holy water takes place. A small bell is then rung to awaken the God, and each individual from 11 years up, does this daily ritual. Cymbals are used and with these to keep time the Hindoo sings to his Krishna and this is followed by a litany on 108 beads. This is a daily ritual, not when the person feels like it or has time or is not busy but every day.

"When a Hindoo becomes a true Christian he has a strong faith to show the Western World". She showed each of the prayer objects mentioned above. Miss Bradley sung a hymn in Hindoo accompanying herself with the cymbals. She closed asking the young people to pray for the missionaries in the field.

James LeMunyan Dies Suddenly

James Lockwood Le Munyan, 55, died suddenly early Wednesday morning, May 19, 1937, at his home on Tuscarora Street. He had been in ill health for several months owing to heart disease. However he had been about his usual household and garden work throughout Wednesday, for he worked in his garden throughout the day and chatted with friends and neighbors. Upon completion of his garden work he painted floors in the house before going to bed. He had been warned against such activities by his attending physician. Mr. LeMunyan died during the night and his death was not discovered until he failed to awaken when called by his mother.

He was born November 1, 1881, in the Town of Tuscarora, a son of the late J. A. and Mrs. LeMunyan. He attended school in the town and was graduated from the Addison High School. His advanced education was received in Hamilton College, Clinton, from which he was graduated in 1906. While there he was a member of the varsity football squad, continuing in the sport which he began while in high school here.

Upon completion of his collegiate work he worked for the Bell Telephone Company and served as traffic manager in Watertown, New York and Pittsburg. After several years with the utility company he engaged in selling building supplies in Greensburg, Pa. He was engaged in this work for many years. Upon the death of his father 14 years ago he relinquished his work there and returned to Addison to care for his mother. Here he sold stocks and bonds, also selling in Elmira, Hornell and vicinity towns.

He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, being a 32 degree man. Mr. Le Munyan joined this fraternity while in College and was active in the Greensburg lodge.

In addition to his mother above mentioned, he leaves one brother, George of this village; two sisters, Mrs. Neil Roach, Canisteo and Mrs. Herbert Seeley, Knoxville, Pa. Funeral will be held Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

The following preliminary announcement has been made:

Upon arrival each Troop will be assigned ample space. The mess hall—Rust Potter Lodge—will be open for exhibits only. There will be limited swimming for Troops with qualified water-front supervisors. Bring bathing suits. The afternoon program will feature district preliminary competition events—starting at 2 o'clock sharp (note change of time) as per program released at District Round-ups. The Council championship for Trophy Skins will follow immediately from 4:00 to 6:00. Contestants may be registered Scouts or Seascouts who have not reached 18th birthday.

Event I—Bugling
At the discretion of the judges, using a regulation bugle and mouthpiece, the contestant will give these "calls": First Call, Reveille, Mess, Swim, Church, To the Colors, Retreat, Taps. The district winners will be eligible as Buglers at Camp Gorton. 1937.

Event II—Fire by Flint

Event III—First Aid
Victim to be designated by team captain. A written problem in First Class First Aid to be delivered to Captain in sealed envelope. A suitable Troop Camporee First Aid Kit required.
